THE RESIDENCE OF THE PERSON OF

SATURDAY NOVEMBER 30, 1878

CLIPTON, November 25, 1878. Editors Dispatch: Please inform me how I can procure a full report of the proecedings of the Public Health Association, and the cost of the same. Address Dr. W. Washington, Fredericksburg, Va.

Two cannot. Perhaps some of our readers can.]

A Note to the Dispatch on Drama. Of all sad, bad things under the sun, a bad actor is the saddest. Sometimes a bad boy can be thrashed good, a bad girl in given cases can be kissed into nobility, bad tooth can be pulled, and a bad book can be praised-can be improved by tacking an eloquent bit of praise to the edge of it. But neither thrashing, kissing, pulling, nor praising, it seems, can draw any but Dad blood out of a bad actor.

This individual is generally silly, sorrowful, sour. He comes by gracelessness by its incomparable scales and other specithrough royal right. The liquor of his mens of manufacture. The firm has reveins is green and stagnant. All the gnomes ceived seven medals—the greatest number and genit of stupidity, gathering from the ever bestowed on a single exhibitor at one four winds, played drum upon his head at World's Fair. Two gold, two silver, and his birth. His utterances are as tuncless one bronze medal were awarded for the as the hinges of that gate through which scales, and a gold and a bronze medal for passed the greatest of actors, that bright the improved type-writer and oscillating being whose subtle impersonation of the pump. It is safe to say that wherever this firm enters specimens of its manufacture Serpent is the wonder of all time. For tearing us literally to shrees, for dashing our it is sure to secure the highest commendasense of art to dirt, for raving, rauting, tions. wriggling, writhing, he has a divinely-got, Imperial prerogative. So, of all sad, bad in this city is steadily on the increase, and things under the swa, a bad actor is the numbers of large scales have been sold in saddest.

It is whispered that the company at the that the new elevator now being built at Theatre last week was unsatisfactory. The Canton will be furnished throughout with Disputch, kind as it is, almost said so once the Standard Scales of the world. Messrs. or twice. But, good or bad, it does not Fairbanks & Co. have just filled an order make much difference now. Mr. Ford has from Washington for two of their celein his day presented us with pretty good companies. He was also presented us occasionally with crusty, crooked, cracked mechanisms which he in an amiable moment and with a stroke of fiction set down as men and women.

Such has been the case, and such is likely to be the case. If we submit to a gulling, then gull as to the utmost; give us frisks and frauds and shams, pile them capriciously up sky-high, and let us "gulp' them down! We may get some salt accidentalky, and salt is purifying.

Some, however, suggest careful discrimination. To one party, in fact, we should always give patrousge and praise; to the other we should not even yield the crumbs of the table, simply because acting Lazarus whenever they are produced, are not reputable beings; as Lazaruses, it is all zight and proper to entertain them at the and "the death of two of our pickets." palace back of the city cemetery, but as actors-we ought to decline. It is the duty of sion that one of these pickets died of old every individual in some way or other to contribute to the support of true players, and it is equally the duty of every one to ignore those who are such only to their The man, woman, or child that witnesses and applauds a person who plays the part of the Moor of Venice, after a study of a day or two, could stomach any pill that the diabolical ingenuity of the most rampant physician could compound. Genius itself is not proof against failures in first representations; Neilson, who, whatever her fletractors may say, has what is known to us as genius, played Viola here for the first time in her life, and, sweet as it was and wonderful as it was, it fell short of perfection. Anybody who wishes to gain a knowledge of the labor necessary for first representations should take up Frances Ann Kemble's infinitely beautiful, tender, passionate, touching description of her studies, trepidations. pared to execute promptly, in the very best styl hopes and tears prior to playing Juliet. If this is so, how peurile must be the kindred efforts of ordinary people, with no study, truly so called, but only with idle BUSINESS-CARDS. words stuffed into memory. It is astounding that it is done. It is still more astounding that it is allowed to be done. And it transcends all other astounding things, this applauding it when it is done. Such innocent creatures should patronize the public schools, not the public play-houses : they appear to want sense, not tragedy-brains with which to appreciate poetic thought. And what such actors should get is-critically slapped: reproof, pungent and pronounced, is what should reward such precipitate folly. To those who love every line that Shakspeare wrote more than it is possible to love aught else, to those who turn daily to his delicate truths and wonderful beauties, to those who hang upon his eloquence, because it so far surpasses in richness and variety and vitality all eloquence of other men,-to such and to many besides these it is acutely painful to hear his marvellous words ruthlessly mangled by simpering clowns and intoxicated mumblers. Most men have lost all hope of ever seeing Shakspearian plays perfectly produced. But cannot we have the exercise of some sort of intelligence and discretion? Is it too much to ask a duke to walk well and a prince to speak well? Is it wrong to request-nay, is it not our right to demand-those who mount the stage to pay the price of the step by washing their hands and memorizing their parts?

A prepossessing person, with a tittle of intelligence and a strong mind, can pass muster in humble characters; but against the "starring and gartering" of such a thing all should vigorously protest. It is the business of every man who takes pleasure or interest in drama to see that such folks are kept in their places, just as screws are kept, to give security and beauty to real power. They may even be jewels in their way, and, as most men know only too well, jewels lend most singular embellishment to rarest female forms. But suppose jewels, by some unheard-of witchery, usurp the functions of women! Not any more ridiculous would this be than the unnatural swelling of a nebulous speck into a star, the puffing of a bright page into a dull tragedian, the strange development of Osric-dainty, exquisite Osric!—into the abortion of a Danish prince.

What is playing the mischief with the stage to-day is the thronging upon it of the inipid children of stupidity. And the thing to do is-tax to the utmost stageresources. If these do not meet requirements, slash into their ranks, open up their files, so that better men can make headway. THE RICHMOND CIRCULATING LIBRARY, corner of Third and Franklin streets, is now open to the public from 10 A.M. to 5 P.M. On its shelves will be found the works of the most popular novelists, including Auerback. Black, Braddon. Bulwer, Collins, Dickens, Ellot, Fleming, Harland. Kingsley, Macdonald, Marilit, Mulock. Payne, Reade, Scott, Thackeray, Yonge, and others; together with the most recent publications in History, science, Biography, Travel, &c. To these adultions will be made of all the New Books as they are published. moving to the front, not spasmodically, but gradually through deep study and reiterated effort. 28 souls, and away goes the untold fascination of stage-life! The art is to be watched, not the inner life of these strange people. And the art is perfect that is nearest akin to nature. And nature, and nature only; is superior to art : as the workings of art must inevitably be less masterful and less memorable than those of nature—only less masterful and less memorable than the splendid spectacular cloud-plays of nature are the tripping and superb movements of truest comedy and tragedy's stupendous unfoldings.

An indignant corres say that the newspapers are badly mistaken if they think Mr. Kenrney is a useless man. We never said he was.
